

We're feeling a little theatrical this issue. You'll see why when you look through it a little over a week from now.

If Twist Collective were indeed a theatre company, each issue would be a performance. Leading up to opening night, we rehearse and refine, make abundant artistic and practical choices, and ready the cast for the moment the curtain draws back on that first evening.

So here, while you consider the program, is the curtain for this fall's issue. Let it tell you what it will for what lies ahead.

